Sheet Music Finding Aid

Introduction

Music has always been a common activity among all peoples. The activity of bringing music into the home became a sign of the flourishing middle class in Canada. To aid people in their entertainments, the industry of sheet music grew rapidly. It was a fragile, inexpensive, rapidly-produced format that allowed lyrics and tunes to circulate quickly, producing profits for the disseminators (if not the creators) and providing an excellent medium for advertising. Its musical content is usually of a popular nature as opposed to the more timeless "serious" music of well-known and respected composers. In the past, because of its size and fragility, and the modest artistic aspirations of many of its composers, sheet music was often considered ephemera by music libraries and seldom formed a part of their permanent collections. In recent years, however, sheet music has become increasingly recognized as an important resource in the study of social history and popular culture, not to mention publishing and printing history.

The City of Edmonton Archives has a wide range of sheet music scattered throughout its holdings. Much of this music comes from the late 1800's and early 1900's. This was a way for the public to easily enjoy music in their homes before the prevalence of the radio and gramophone. The music itself shows how important this activity was for the individuals using the copies, from people who brought the music with them when they emigrated from other countries to music that is falling apart from use. When sheet music is found in a collection it often reflects contemporary events of the time-period when it was written.

The songs can also reflect different aspects of people's lives. The material at the City of Edmonton Archives demonstrates the wide range of activities throughout the city. Some collections from the World War One era are highly patriotic such as In Flanders Field, The Rose of No Man's Land, and Our Soldiers, Welcome Home. Other music reflects protest issues such as I'll Be a Pal to Your Boy. Many collections contain dance tunes and operetta songs which encourage people to come together and share in putting on the music as an activity. Some are purely whimsical pieces such as Doodle Doo Doo and How Can You Toot a Toot-Toot When You Have No Toot. In the opposite vein there is a great deal of religious music, demonstrating another aspect of these people's lives and how they used music to express their character. A few collections even include music written by the donors or members of their family, showcasing another aspect of how people were able to bring music into their lives and express themselves.

Currently, seven fonds at the City of Edmonton Archives contain sheet music holdings. The lists of music from these collections are included in this finding aid.

There are five sets of the list in this finding aid - each sorted differently: by MS #, by Title, by Date, by Composer, by Publisher.

The full description of each fonds or collection can be found in the City of Edmonton Archives online catalogue.
